Message from the Southeast Chair:

It's great to be looking forward to our Southeast Chapter Suppliers' Night Social 2009! No other event provides us such an enjoyable opportunity to get together with so many colleagues and suppliers while enjoying dinner, and also for this year, a wine tasting!

Lisa Sloan, House Committee Chair, has done it again, and lined up a great facility and speaker at the Crescent Club. There will be a wine lecture so you can "learn while tasting" as well as the usual great dinner fare and door prizes. Please see page 5 for full details of the event.

The local chapter has felt the economic pinch that has affected so many of us, so I'd like to take this opportunity to encourage our supporters to be as generous as possible with door prizes and contributions. Many of my earlier "special request for funding" e-mails came back undeliverable, so if you didn't receive it please consider a contribution and verify your e-mail address with Cathy Anglin to make sure your contact information is up to date.

See you at Suppliers' Night!

SOCIETY OF COSMETIC CHEMISTS ANNOUNCES $1000 CASH RAFFLE

The SCC Annual Scientific Seminar will be held in Chicago June 4-5, 2009. Registration material was mailed to all SCC Members in March and can be found on the SCC Website. As we are currently in tough economic times, we are expecting a decrease in registration. However, Chicago should be an affordable city to travel to as O'Hare International Airport is a major US hub and airfares should be reasonable.

In an effort to also drive incentive for registrants to stay at the Chicago Hilton, the Society is offering a $1,000 Cash Raffle. For all registrants to the Seminar that also stay at the Hilton Chicago they will be entered into a raffle for a chance to receive $1,000. As average attendance at the Seminars is around 300, the odds of winning are very good.

Q. I have a project to develop a line of naturally-based skin and body care products. The line needs to be as close to 100% naturally-based as possible. Do you have any good resources to help me get started and to insure that the ingredients that I am using are acceptable?

A. Well...this is a classic case of the “good news – bad news” scenario. The good news is that there are many good resources and the bad news is...that there are many good resources! The problem at the moment is that there are numerous viewpoints as to what is “natural” or “naturally-based”. This of course is wholly separate from the organic standard with which there is also considerable discord in the personal care community. Among the many standards that have been proposed, the following are the key “players” in this initiative:

Natural Products Association – www.naturalproductsassoc.org

Whole Foods - <http://www.wholefoodsmarket.com/products/premium-body-care.php>

Oasis - <http://www.oasisseal.org>

BDIH - http://www.kontrollierte-naturkosmetik.de/e/index_e.htm

Ecocert - <http://www.ecocert.com>

Soil Association - <http://www.soilassociation.org/certification>

ICEA - <http://www.icea.info>

NaTrue - <http://www.natrue.org>

Interestingly, Ecocert, BDIH, Soil Association, ICEA and others have agreed on a harmonized European standard under the banner of Cosmos. A draft of the harmonized natural and organic standard can be found at http://www.cosmos-standard.org/docs/Cosmetics_Organic_Standard_Consultation.pdf. It was thought that NaTrue would join the others but they have decided to continue along their own path at this point.

You will find that there are key differences as you compare the various standards however they are also very similar with respect to the types of ingredients and processes that are allowed and those that are not. My advice is to look at the Natural Products Association standard as well as the draft standard from Cosmos. If you can comply with both of these standards, you will be in good shape. It will require some creative formulation technique as well as some soul-searching with respect to preservatives, surfactants thickeners and stabilizers but once you get the hang of it, subsequent formulation projects will move along seamlessly.
